FABIAN GARCIA ISSUES BULLETIN ON APPLE CULTURE UNDER IRRIGATION

Deals With the Selection of Land, Care of Trees and Varieties for New Mexico.

Agricultural College, N. M., March 14. Prof. Fabian Garcia, horticulturist at the experiment station at this place, has issued a bulletin entitled "Apple Culture Under Irrigation." The pamphlet is a large one and is divided into many subheads. It is very well illustrated, most of the photographs having been made by the author.

New Mexico Varieties. Among the most interesting and instructive of the subheads is preparation of the land, selecting the trees, care of young trees, varieties adapted to New Mexico, and insects.

Prof. Garcia goes very fully into the topic on the choice of varieties. His idea is that different varieties are best for shipping, home use, early or late bearing, canning, etc., and that it takes a good deal of thought on the part of the planter to familiarize himself with the qualities of the trees he is about to plant.

He advises very strongly against planting trees haphazard, as it often means a great expense and the loss of four or five years because undesirable varieties have to be taken out and young trees planted in their places.

He also advises against planting too many different kinds of apples, as apple buyers do not care for the fruit from orchards where they get a different kind of apple off of every other tree.

Selection of Trees. As to selecting the trees, Prof. Garcia advises against buying trees for their size only, as large trees are not always the healthiest. He says the ideal trees are the straight and smooth ones.

Although there is a great diversity of opinion as to the time to plant trees since one may be planted any time during its dormant period, it is thought that, all things considered, it is best to plant in New Mexico in the spring. This is caused by the fact that trees dry out during the winter and if they are transplanted in the fall they dry out without getting any moisture from the ground, as the roots do not get started until spring.

Under the care of young trees, Prof. Garcia very strongly recommends that the trees be kept very well pruned during the first and second years of their growth, leaving only such shoots as are needed for the frame work of the trees. During the first two or three years of growth other crops may be planted on the land with the orchard, provided that attention is given to extra irrigation, as the ground has to furnish moisture for two crops at the same time.

It is shown from experiment in the Mesilla and Pecos valley that even alfalfa may be grown among the trees, for four or five years, without injury to the orchard. In this case, however, it is well to leave about three feet of space on each side of the young trees.

Irrigation of Trees. In Prof. Garcia's opinion there is no question in orchard management that is less understood than the question of irrigation. There is at present no definite information on this subject, as there have been no thorough tests made along this line. Irrigation, as a general thing, should be begun soon after the trees begin to grow in the spring, and the trees should be irrigated every three or four weeks during the summer. Care should be taken to stop irrigation in the fall early enough for the growth of young trees to mature before cold weather. Prof. Garcia advises "what-ever we do we should irrigate enough."

EL PASO TEAM CLEANED UP FOR BOTH GAMES

A. & M. Team Easily Wins From the Military Institute Boys in the Games at Mesilla Saturday.

Agricultural College, N. M., March 14. The baseball games with the El Paso Military Institute were played Saturday as per schedule. The score in the first game was ten to two in favor of the college team and that of the last game was seven to one in favor of the college. Owing to the fact that this is the first game of the season for both teams, the scores were large and the games both slow. The afternoon game was the better of the two, as both teams saved their best batteries for that game.

The college team appears to have had better coaching than that of the El Paso boys and most of them are older and more experienced players. Both teams showed fine material, especially in the infield, and promise to play excellent ball later in the season.

The schedule for the college team is unusually good this year, some 10 or 12 games being booked with the different educational institutions of the territory, and several others with teams outside of the territory.

RESIGNATIONS AT A. & M. COLLEGE IN FACULTY

Several Members Are Said to Have Tendered Them Today—College Notes.

Agricultural College, N. M., March 14.—It is understood that at the meeting of the board of regents today several important changes will be made in the affairs of the college, and it is rumored that several of the most prominent members of the faculty will tender their resignations at this meeting of the board. The meeting will be a very important one for these reasons.

There was a box party at the residence of Mr. Hull, of Mesilla Park, for the benefit of the Las Cruces Baptist church. Large congregations greeted bishop Kendrick Sunday, the little church being filled to its capacity at the service Sunday morning. There were 13 persons in the confirmation class.

Jesse Sheppard is much better and Dr. Carpenter at El Paso is now confident that he can save the sight of his injured eye.

The Ibsen play that the expression department has been working on lately has been dropped, and something lighter will be tried. The new play will probably be given during commencement week.

A good deal of interest is being taken in tennis now and the courts are in better condition than they have been for several seasons past. No tournaments have been definitely arranged but there are one or two in sight.

The dormitory social Friday night, which is only the second since Christmas was the usual delightfully informal dance, and was well attended.

Prof. Mitchell, of the chemistry department, went to El Paso on Friday afternoon to act as one of the officials in the basketball game between E. P. M. L. and the El Paso V. M. C. A. Saturday night.

Miss Haggart, of the domestic science department, went to El Paso Saturday.

CIGARET, AWNING AND AN ATTORNEY START A BLAZE

An attorney, a cigaret of the home made variety, a lighted match and a sun dried awning were the parties to a little damage suit this afternoon in the City attornal bank building. The match, after lighting the attorney's cigaret, fell carelessly on the awning of the Kline store. A blaze resulted, which burned a black, ugly hole in the canvas. A pitcher of water doused from the attorney's window put the fire out. It was declared a non-suit.
